THE LATE WHIS CONVENTION .- The late Philadelphia Convention was one of the richest farces ever enacted in an enlightened age and country. Not a single avowal of principle was made; not even upon the war quesnewspaper tirade for the past 18 months. It tion, which has furnished the staple of Whig was not even stated by that body whether their nominee is a Whig. The Philadelphia Pennsylvanian remarking upon this, justly ob- and passed serves that, " after the nominations of Taylor and Fillmore, the concern literally exploded into fragments, an adjournment sine die was moved and carried, and the delegates, excited by various emotions, fled from the hall, as if from a burning powder magazine. Not a word was said upon the great questions of the day. Not a resolution was passed of any kind; but under the whip of the Taylor leaders, a very intelligent body from all parts of the Union is compelled to separate, each member for his home, degraded and disgraced .-Nothing was said about the war, though the hero of Buena Vista is nominated! Nothing was said about the tariff-nothing about the acquisition of territory-nothing about events in Europe-not even a poor word is vouchsafed about the absent soldiers in Mexico, who have been upholding the honor of our country under circumstances full of peril .-Even an attempt to endorse the Allison letter of Gen'l Taylor failed, amid a ridiculous confusion."

SEIES BRIGHT .- With the exception of New York and South Carolina, there never was nomination made which has been more enthusiastically responded to than that of Cass and Butler. In these two States all, we hope and think, will yet go well. South Carolina cannot vote for Gen. Taylor and Millard Fillmore her Legislature will elect a Cass and Butler electoral ticket. Mark that, too. In New as we are, whilst elsewhere we are all unanimity and harmony, and they are distracted. In the great West, Cass and Butler will sweep everything before them. Listen to what the their first reading. Ohio Statesman, the leading Democratic paper of that great State, says :-

Her early pioneers are in the field—the men who have perilled life and limb in defence of the frontier settlements from the tomahawk and scalping knife of the savage myrmidons of Great Britain. The men that led her gallant volunteers to battle, and fought by their side, are now in the field, selected by the democracy as their standard-bearers in the coming contest. They are known; they have been tried; and in peril's hour they have never known fear. The selection of such men is a compliment to the west and the western pioneers; and their children will respond to it by giving the vote of the democracy. In that struggle, Ohio will endorse her old pioneer and defender by a large ma- and nays. jority over any man that can secure the nomination by the whig convention. Indiana will roll up her thousands; Iowa will show that whiggery | the motion prevailed. has no abiding place within her limits; while gallant Illinois-the unconquered and the unconpopulation, has a giant soul; and there whiggery whiggery from every county in the State.

The value of Ireland to Great Britain .- It is the fashion, now-a-days, here as well as in England, to allege that Ireland is a dead weight upon Great Britain, and that if Repeal is conceded by the latter, a great saving will ment for the year ending 30th June, 1845. be realized by the Queen's government.
